

PC Personal computer

Politically correct

Window adornment

Christmas presents

Compliments of the season

Santa Claus

Christmas tree

Acts-even the stones will cry out

PC Christmas

Andy: Well, Lee, got them up have you?

Lee: Pardon?

Andy: Got 'em up? Your Christmas decorations.

Lee: (exaggerated shock) Shhh. You can't say that!

Andy: What decorations. I can. Listen. decorations.

Lee: No, you wally. Not decorations. Christmas.

Andy: What? Why ever not.

Lee: PC.

Andy: What? Where? I'm not doing anything wrong. Anyway I'm well in with the boys in blue.

Lee: Not PC police constable, PC.

Andy: It's no good trying to guess your present mate. Anyway I can't afford a PC. What, do you think I'm made of money?

Lee: No you numbskull. Not PC-personal computer. PC politically correct.

Andy: Huh?

Lee: Yes. Politically correct. You can't go round saying Christmas as in Christmas decorations.

Andy: You just did. And in any case why not?

Lee: Because it's not PC-politically correct.

Andy: Oh, so what have I got stuck up at home on my ceiling then?

Lee: Ah that's easy. You have seasonal hangings.

Andy: Oh. Well anyway, have you finished your Christmas present shopping then? Still time to get me a nice surprise.

Lee: There you go again. You said the word.

Andy: What word.

Lee: The 'C' word.

Andy: Oh. So I can't even say Chris....you know present.

Lee: No. Absolutely not. You're safer with err....festive gift, say.

Andy: Well how about Happy Christmas (whisper)

Lee : Compliments of the season.

Andy: Well how about Christmas (whisper) pudding.

Lee: Seasonal fayre.

Andy: Father Christmas (whisper)

Lee: Stick with Santa.

Andy: Right Santa Claus then?

Lee: No, not Santa Claus. Comes from (looks round for spies) Saint Nicholas. It is not directly the 'C' word but it has overtones.

Andy: What kind of overtones?

Lee: No PC ones.

Andy: Lee have you gone completely mad? What is going on in that shrivelled brain of yours exactly?

Lee: The thing is, Andy, we must not offend. If you mention the 'C' word you might just offend someone. So best avoid it.

Andy: So let me get you right. If I say (Shouts) Christmas these people out there are going to take offence.

Lee: Shhh, shh. Are you mad?

Andy: I'm not.

Lee: Remember. PC, mate. PC.

Andy: Lee, just what is so offensive about the word Christ....

Lee: Yes we know what it is. Look it's because of the make up of the word.

Andy: What like Max Factor. You've guessed your present now.

Lee: Not that kind of make up. The parts that make the word up.

Andy: As in Chris and Mas?

Lee: Precisely, except it's not Chris and mas. Would be fine if it was. Chris is fine. Bit of a lad actually but not offensive.

Andy: I know it's Christ. Well Christ actually.

Lee: Shhh. Shut up, you fool. Now you've really done it.

Andy: Well, I'm sorry. For life of me I can't see why mentioning the Christ whose name forms the first 5 letter of Christmas could possibly be offensive or non PC. How can a baby born 2000 years ago possibly be a threat to people today?

Lee: Oh, the baby's not the threat. Oh no.

Andy: So what then?

Lee: It's what he said and did and claimed when he grew up. I guess.

Andy: Then there's no problem, Lee, old mate. We totally ignore that.

A.Lund